BATTLE FOR STALINGRAD BEGINS IN EARNEST AS NAZI TROOPS AND TANKS POUR ACROSS DON; VIOLENT FIGHTING

Timoshenko Throws Reinforcements Into Tremendous Battle, But Nazis Continue to Push Forward at Terrific Cost to Themselves

MOSCOW, Aug. 24.—(INS)—The battle for Stalingrad began in earnest today as German troops and tanks poured across the Don southeast of Kletskaya and northeast of Kotelnikov.

Violent bloody fighting was in progress on the east bank of the river where it makes its big loop before the metropolis on the Volga.

Marshal Semyon Timoshenko, Russia's wildest military strategist, threw reinforcements into the tremendous battle with a prodigal hand, but there was no gainsaying the fact that the Nazis continued to push forward—at terrific cost to themselves.

The chief break-through in Russian defenses was southeast of Kletskaya, but northeast of Kotelnikov the Germans drove another wedge into stubbornly retreating Soviet forces.

A vast numerical superiority in manpower, tanks and planes appeared to have decided the immediate issue. The Soviets defended the river crossing to the last gasp and fell back only when the Germans attacked with overwhelming strength.

The situation continued bleak in the Caucasus. The Red Army was fighting a stubborn defensive battle south of Krasnodar but the threat to the great Black Sea port and naval base of Novorossiisk was increasing hourly.

Caldwell-Ott Ceremony Solemnized on Saturday

HULMEVILLE, Aug. 24.—The marriage of Miss Ruth Elizabeth Ott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ott, Parkland, to Mr. Stafford Caldwell, was an event of Saturday afternoon.

The nuptial ceremony was solemnized in Grace Episcopal Church at the hour of 2:30, with the Rev. Albert W. Eastburn officiating. Mr. Ott gave his daughter in marriage. Organ music was provided by Mrs. Harry Friedrich, of Langhorne.

The contracting parties had one bridal attendant each. For the occasion the bride chose an ensemble of dark blue.

Motion Picture Industry To Be Spearhead of Drive

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has designated the Motion Picture Industry as the spearhead for the Treasury's billion dollar war bond and stamp drive in September. All branches of the movie industry are to act as the "spark plug" for September, as did the retailers in July. This does not mean that the motion picture industry is expected to sell the entire $1,000,000,000 worth of bonds in September. It means that the industry—through showmanship and merchandising efforts in which it is supposed to be adept—is to try to stimulate all bond selling activities, from all sources, in an attempt to hit the billion-dollar goal—a target hit only in January, following Pearl Harbor, July was the second largest month—over $900,000,000.

An industry that deals in glamor and emotional entertainment, it was logical that the motion picture campaign should turn to an emotional appeal as its theme. The month's drive is called "Salute to Our Heroes." Its slogan and theme is: "Buy A Bond To Honor Every Mother's Son In Service." That is the sentimental appeal to be carried direct to the moviegoers of America. "This is a people's war—$5,000,000 moviegoers are the people," says a poster above the desk of National Campaign Director Sir Fabian, theatre circuit owner, who has deserted his own business to give all his time to the drive—as have hundreds of other movie industry leaders.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS
By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Let Him Now Buckle Down

Washington, Aug. 22. IT IS a rather dreadful thing that, in the midst of so terrible a war, there should be widespread gratification over any discomfiture to the Commander in Chief. But, certainly popular satisfaction with the defeat of Mr. Roosevelt's candidate in the recent New York State Democratic convention has been as general as pronounced.

NEITHER the face-saving gestures of his friends nor the President's own transparent insistence that he had no candidate; that there was no fight between Mr. Farley and himself; that he was too busy with the war to take any interest in politics—none of these contentions diminishes the discredit of a performance which only those tied to him personally or politically attempted to defend—because none of them is true. The truth is that after personally assuring Mr. Farley that he had no objection to Attorney General Bennett, Mr. Roosevelt made himself the center of the Farley-Bennett opposition and used his personal influence to force the reluctant Senator Mead to enter the field. Through "Eddie" (Paving Blocks) Flynn and other New Deal aides, he extended himself to the limit to ditch Mr. Farley's candidate and force his own choice on the convention. Had he succeeded, Mr. Farley would have been eliminated from political life and Administration control of the 1944 New York delegates assured.

EVERY POSTED newspaperman and politician knows these things to be true. Instead of rising above the level of politics and centering his whole energy upon winning the war, Mr. Roosevelt has been revealed as guilty of exactly the kind of partisan political activity he had urged should be abandoned until

"To give India her freedom now sighted joy knew no bounds. All were glad to reach their home-land or a place of refuge and peace."

This is the expression of opinion of the Rev. and Mrs. George E. Paulus, missionaries to Northeast Bihar, India. Commenting briefly on the political situation in India, Mrs. Paulus, who was corroborated in her opinion by the Rev. Paulus, added that "The Indians themselves could not live at peace. The Hindus and Mohammedans are too suspicious of each other."

The Paulus family, father, mother, and three children, who are spending a furlough in the United States, are staying for a time at the home of their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. S. Howard Voder, West Bristol. They plan to leave soon for the Grantham missionary rest home of the Brethren in Christ, the religious group with which the Rev. Paulus is connected, and under whose auspices he has spent the past 17 years as a missionary in India.

This is the second trip made to the United States by the family, they being home on leave eight years ago. They came at the present time because of several reasons. Their furlough was due, there was internal trouble brewing in India, the Japanese were advancing, and furthermore the American consul strongly urged that all American citizens who could should leave at once. The Paulus family left Bihar Province on the 25th of May, and embarked from Bombay. The 4½-day journey by train to the port of embarkation was the most trying ordeal on the journey, Mrs. Paulus states.

The trains were running slow due to the fact they were crowded with evacuees, and also with soldiers being transported to the front. The heat added to the trial on the long journey, visitors to India usually avoiding travel in the summer because of the height of the mercury and the intense humidity.

For part of the journey of the transport, route of which and time consumed is not disclosed, it was escorted by a destroyer and aircraft. The ship was taxed beyond its capacity, 1400 being crowded aboard. Included were 400 missionaries, and many children, in addition to other passengers many of whom were evacuees from Burma and shipwrecked persons from all parts of the world.

The crowded conditions, the complete black-out at night, the fact that four depth-charges were sent overboard at one point in the journey—all added to the discomfort. But when the coast of the United States was sighted joy knew no bounds. All were glad to reach their home-land or a place of refuge and peace.

A measles epidemic aboard boat included 75 per cent of the children, and the Paulus children, George E. Jr., 15, Lista Grace, 10, and Miriam Evangeline, were among those stricken. Little Miriam passed her first birthday on the journey home. "At one city in Africa we saw ships with torpedo holes in their sides," was the comment of George, Jr., who with his sister, Lista, found much of unusual interest on such a trip. "But life on a transport under such conditions lacks all the gaiety and fun of a usual passenger ship journey," added Mrs. Paulus. "One is ever-conscious of the dangers, making levity scarce. We were ordered to have our life-belts with us at all times." For the tiny babies no preservers were provided, the mothers being expected to care for them in case it was necessary to leap into the sea. Small preservers were provided for the other children, however.

As regards food aboard the transport, the Paulus family stated it was very plentiful, but that it became stale as journey's end neared. It was necessary to ration water for the entire trip, as the time which would be consumed on the trip was not known. "All adults except mothers with babies, and all children over 10 years of age were served cafeteria style in standing positions."

Upon reaching their destination in the United States one entire day was required to disembark. In the Province of Bihar the Rev. Paulus was in charge of a boys' school and orphanage, operated by the Church of the Brethren in Christ. He also served as pastor of a church there. During his absence other missionaries are caring for the work at the school.

Bihar adjoins Assam, not far from the possible invasion point of the enemy. Where the Paulus family was located is near the Manipur Road, the terminus of the overland route to Burma, and over which route thousands of evacuees fled from Burma. A large number were housed in the boys' school which the pupils vacated for

Quisling in Norway to Make Peace with Norwegian Church

Stockholm—Vidkun Quisling, Nazi premier of Norway, has returned to Oslo from Germany under orders from Adolf Hitler to make peace with the Norwegian Church, Stockholm newspapers declared today.

It was believed that the Hitler change in attitude was due to representations of German military authorities in Norway, in view of the danger of Allied invasion of the country.

They suggested to Hitler that it would be unwise to provoke the Norwegians unnecessarily, it was reported.

To Grant Non-Belligerent Status to Brazil

Buenos Aires—Uruguay, Chile, Peru and possibly Argentina will grant non-belligerent status to Brazil before the day is out, diplomatic circles in Buenos Aires declared today.

Argentina's attitude may be known late today although it was said to have been settled earlier at a long conference between President Ramon Castillo and Foreign Minister Enrique Ruiz-Guzman.

The granting of non-belligerent status to Brazil would mean that Brazilian ships could use the ports of those countries granting her such status.

Largest American Convoy of War Crosses Atlantic Safely

Somewhere In Britain—The largest American convoy of this war has safely crossed the Atlantic to land vast war materials and a large number of crack fighting units at a number of British ports, it was officially announced today.

News of the arrival of the giant convoy gave emphasis to the prospects of establishing a second front on the continent in the near future.

A large part of the convoy consisted of flyers and ground crews to bolster the already formidable U. S. Army Air Force in the European theatre. However, there were also many artillerymen, engineers and anti-tank units. The men represented nearly all 48 states.

TOT OF THREE YEARS IS RESCUED SUNDAY; WALKED INTO LAKE

Unmindful of the danger, little Ellen Vandine, aged three years, decided to follow her older brother, Kenneth, six, into the waters of Silver Lake, yesterday afternoon.

Fully clothed, the tot waded into the water, and the next instant was out of sight as she apparently stepped into a hole or reached a depth beyond her tiny height.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Vandine, 837 Pine street, are thankful that a woman swimmer nearby saw the incident, and hurried to the rescue of the child.

The rescuer, unidentified, quickly reached the child, and had her safe on shore within a few seconds. Not knowing whom she had rescued, the woman addressed the group of small boys, and Ellen's brother, Kenneth. The older boys, who had bicycles handy, volunteered to take the tot home, and supporting her on a cycle they soon had her safe with her father and mother.

Mr. Vandine, realizing that his daughter had been through an ordeal, and thinking she probably needed medical attention, took her to Harriman Hospital for a check-up, then returned with her to his home.

Unable to learn whom the rescuer of the child might be, Mr. Vandine took other means to day of expressing his deep appreciation, hoping that public expression in advertising columns of The Courier might reach the eyes of his benefactor.

RESCUE SQUADS DRAG RIVER FOR BODY OF YOUTH

Four Groups From This Area Endeavor to Recover Body of Trenton Boy

DROWNED AT YARDLEY

Rescue squads from this area mobilized Saturday afternoon and dragged the Delaware River for hours in an effort to recover the body of a Trenton youth who was drowned in the channel. The squads returned to the scene again yesterday and continued until dark in their efforts to bring the body to the surface. The body had not been recovered this morning.

The youth, Paul Chambers, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell M. Chambers, 17 North Westfield avenue, Trenton, drowned Saturday afternoon at about three o'clock when he went down opposite the Black Rock Road, on the Pennsylvania side, about two and a half miles north of the Calhoun street bridge.

Chambers was attempting to swim from a small island just below Rotary Island to the Pennsylvania side of the river. He was accompanied by two companions, Thomas Brooks, 16, and Charles Hillegass, 16, both of Trenton. Brooks and Chambers walked through the shallow water to the island, and then started swimming together through the deep current toward the opposite bank. Chambers became panicky and Brooks tried to aid him, but when the drowning youth threw his arms around him, Brooks shook himself loose. Brooks made a second attempt but to no avail.

The Bucks County Rescue Squad, Goodwill Fire Co. No. 3, Bristol Blood Donors, and Croydon Fire Co., all rushed to the scene. Each of the crews had their own boats and equipment and they dragged the stream until midnight Saturday. The squads returned yesterday morning and again dragged the river until late last night.

One Man's Opinion

By Walter Kierman
(I. N. S. Staff Writer)

Eastern political front communique from the headquarters of General Farley (delayed): "Landing party repulsed. We got three blimps. Our only loss was a list of our troops. Reprisals can be expected in occupied territory."

Joint communique from Tammany Hall to the Belgian Court-yard: "We have met the enemy and we are his."

It was Tammany's second communique. The first, issued immediately after abortive attempts to establish a beachhead in Brooklyn failed, read "We do it again."

The telephone advertisement urges "Please help keep the lines clear for war business to Washington."

"Who was that war business I saw you with last night?"

"That was no war business . . . that was Jim Mead."

The invasion forces, starting down the Potomac in small thinly-disguised patronage barges, got mired in the Gowanus Canal which is the same spot to which the Dodgers lure the opposition for the kill.

But they fought bravely with everything they have—and they have everything.

Thought for the day: Now we can get on with the war—until November?

ACHIEVEMENT OVER ODDS

If some persons still wonder why the United Nations' offensive in the South Pacific isn't rolling faster, the experience of Capt. Delbert J. Kelley is one example of the difficulties involved.

Captain Kelley, skipper of an American supply ship, was charged with delivering a number of drums of aviation gasoline to an American air base on a South Seas island. Captain Kelley found that the only real anchorage was 175 miles away from the base. After looking over the situation from a plane, he finally maneuvered his ship through a narrow uncharted channel to a point 200 yards off a beach near the air field. Then he was ready for the actual delivery of the gasoline.

Captain Kelley moored his vessel and moored a tug alongside with her stern toward the beach. His crew and soldiers from the base constructed two parallel log booms from the ship to the shore. Then the drums of gasoline were rolled overboard into the narrow waterway between the booms and were driven to the beach by the wash from the tug's propeller. Soldiers took them to the base.

Such an operation shows what ingenuity must be used to overcome the formidable obstacles to keeping troops on various outlying bases supplied. And supplied they must be if the Japanese are to be driven from their South Pacific conquests and forced to the defense of their own islands.

Considering the drawbacks of the situation—uncharted waters, supply difficulties and fierce Japanese resistance from well-developed bases, the American people can take particular pride in the achievements of the American Marines and their Allied naval and air collaborators in the Solomon Islands.

INGENUITY MARCHES ON

The inventive genius of Americans appears to be flowering as a result of the shortages of materials formerly imported from foreign lands and in consequence of restrictions and priorities imposed by governmental edict.

The development of a traffic light, which cannot be seen by enemy fliers unless they come down to within 300 feet of it, but which still furnishes enough illumination to handle ordinary high speed traffic is an invention of vast importance. Halting of traffic during blackouts in areas where enemy raiders are likely to appear with frequency would constitute a heavy blow to the war effort besides causing tremendous inconvenience.

The finding of a substance which takes the place of shellac in the making of phonograph records may be considered an invention of less importance from a material standpoint, but it is of prime value in another sense.

The War Production Board has restricted by 60 per cent the use of shellac for civilian purposes and if no substitute had been found the number of records produced would have been greatly curtailed. The psychological front is important in wartime. It is essential that the spirit of the people be kept at high tide.

While war songs that sway multitudes have not yet appeared in this conflict, it is heartening to know that but for Petrillo the juke boxes of the nation would be ready to receive them if and when they arrive.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol Oct. 21, 1880. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

The Democratic Pioneer Corps of Newtown was hospitably entertained last evening at the residence of Dr. Groom, and during the evening the Bristol Democratic Pioneers were presented with a handsome cake, John C. Stuckert, Esq., making the speech, and Frank Knight responding for the club.

On Monday night some carpenter's tools, belonging to F. P. Crichton and Mark Stradling, were stolen from the vacant house owned by J. H. Wood, near the Hollow Bridge. A "jimmy," which had been used to effect an entrance into the house, was found near the window, where the burglars entered the house. The tools have not yet been recovered.

The Democratic funeral last night was quite an extensive one. There were 640 mourners in line following the band, which appropriately played "All the world is sad and dreary, everywhere I roam."

On Tuesday evening, about dark, John T. Haney, of Easton, aged about 27 years, captain of one of Uhler's boats, started with his boat up the canal. He was on the tow-path, driving the mules, and a boy was on the boat steering. Haney, stumbled in to the canal, and before assistance could be rendered by the boy, who was the only person within sight, the man drowned. Search was immediately made for his body, but it was not recovered until yesterday morning. The verdict of the coroner's jury was "accidental death by drowning."

Miss Anna N. Beck, of Philadelphia, who proposes to organize a choral class on next Saturday evening in the lecture-room of the Baptist Church, is a graduate of Musicvale Seminary, Conn. . . .

The Bristol Institute met on Tuesday evening. The programme was as follows: Piano duet, Mrs. Stuckert and Miss Lunderbough; essay, Special Series, No. 2, upon Florence, Mrs. A. E. M. Parker, read by Miss Parker; vocal solo, Miss Maggie Bach; reading, Frank P. Adams; essay upon Flowers, Mrs. Edwin Wilson, read by Miss Hawke; vocal solo, Miss Maggie Laid; reading, Miss Bostwick; piano solo, Miss Hough, substitute for Miss Doron. . . .

Recognition services will be held in the meeting house of the First Baptist Church this evening at half past seven o'clock. Rev. P. S. Henson, D. D., is expected to preach. A number of other ministers will be present and take part in the service. The music for the occasion will be rendered by a quartette choir from Philadelphia. . . .

Ex-Senator Conover, who is the Republican candidate for Governor in Florida, is quite well known in Bristol, where he has been a frequent visitor. He is making a vigorous canvass in Florida. . . .

One of the most interesting and enthusiastic meetings of the campaign was held last Thursday evening at the Wigwam. The speakers were Gen. J.

Q. Lane and Gen. James A. Beaver. The former, although not a fluent speaker, gave some very strong reasons why the Republican party should succeed, and among other things, contrasted the difference in the price of labor in Great Britain and Europe and the United States. The contrast was not at all favorable to the countries governed by free trade idea. General Beaver's address was an eloquent appeal, fair, impartial, and free from personalities. . . .

John Rook, who lives near Yardleyville, visited his native land, Germany. On his arrival in Germany he went to a broker's office to exchange a part of his money for gold, and was naturally surprised when the broker told him United States notes were at a premium, and paid him $52.50 in gold for $50 in United States currency. . . .

Our enemies have been crushed. When one considers the vast responsibilities the war has placed upon the President; when one knows how far from effectively his war machine in Washington is functioning; when one realizes that the lives of millions of young Americans and the fate of the nation itself depend upon the quality of our national leadership, the part played by the White House in this New York factional struggle is peculiarly revolting. . . .

IT WOULD BE much worse than any loss of Presidential prestige if popular belief in the President's sincerity and singlemindedness should be shaken at this time. Faith in his wholehearted, unselfish concentration upon the war effort is vital to the success of the United Nations. He has no right to risk shattering that faith no matter what the political or personal temptation. As things turned out, he has sustained a totally unnecessary defeat which has damaged him personally and conferred no benefit upon the great cause to which he is supposed to be wholly dedicated. He has wasted both time and energy, neither of which he could spare, and to a considerable extent has justified the condemnatory comments that have followed the convention. . . .

IN ADDITION, by press conference evasions and the slyness with which he directed this political campaign while pretending to have nothing to do with it, he has forfeited the respect of at least some who heretofore have been friendly. There is no mystery about the somewhat extraordinary unanimity with which press and people were pleased with the outcome of this struggle. For one thing, there was a general feeling that the President without justification, had protruded himself into the contest—had, in fact, made the contest. There was also more than a little resentment over the manner in which New York politicians had been running in and out of the White House and a pretty deep-seated notion that there was distinct impropriety — to be mild about it — in any Presidential participation in such a fight at such a time. . . .

THERE WAS THE further feeling that Mr. Farley had not been decently dealt with; that this was an effort to "liquidate" him; that, take them all in all, he is about the straightest, cleanest, most honorable politician in the country—a man whose word is always good and whose loyalty to his friends has not been questioned. For still another thing, there was very great relief in every part of the country that the radical leaders of the American Labor party, with whom Mr. Roosevelt had conferred and co-operated, were unable to bully Mr. Farley into dropping his candidature or to dictate the course of a major political party in the greatest of the States. Probably there were other reasons, but these are enough to account for the fact that no more popular political victory than Mr. Farley's over Mr. Roosevelt has been recorded for quite a while. . . .

AS TO THE "party harmony" about which Mr. Roosevelt so touchingly wrote to Governor Lehman, there should be no trouble about getting it with Mr. Bennett. Certainly, the President and his Labor party friends do not want Mr. Dewey elected Governor. They must know that lukewarmness on their part toward Mr. Bennett trends straight in that direction. They will bluff around for a while, of course, but in the end the labor professionals have no real alternative. At any rate, it is hoped that from now on the President, abandoning his political diversions, will put everything he has in the way of thought and time and energy into the war effort. The confidence of the country would hardly stand another exhibition of White House politics. Heaven knows there are enough important things crying to be done—and undone—in Washington to tax the full strength of any man. Let the President buckle down now to them and forget there is such a thing as politics. . . .

Due to the tire and gas restrictions and also federal and state regulations, all bus stops within the mile and a half limit have been eliminated. There will be fewer stops on the regular trips. The present buses and tires may have to last a number of years, so it is hoped that pupils and parents will co-operate, realizing that limited transportation is better than none at all.

Johnsville, Davisville and Southampton, are included. At Johnsville, relocation of the road will take away all of the Rorer store and part of the residence. The historic Craven mansion, opposite the Rorer property, which was standing at the time of the Revolution, is several feet out in the new right-of-way, but will be preserved for the time being at least, it is indicated.

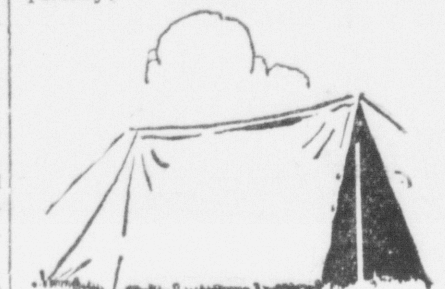

Straightening of the S-curve at Davisville takes the line of the roadway through the house and general store of Mr. and Mrs. William Peters. It is probable they will be set back instead of being torn down. At the Second Street pike intersection the widening will make necessary the removal of the building now housing the American Store, the post office and a lunch room. The southeast corner it is understood, will also be widened to eliminate a dangerous traffic condition, and a block of stores and residences thereon will be removed.

The contract calls for the work to be completed in 70 working days and, although no official notice has been served on abutting property owners as yet, they have been told they will be expected to vacate within 10 days after notification, those buildings which are to be removed.

Improvement of Route 132, one of the most important and heavily traveled east-west highways between Philadelphia and New Hope, was prompted at this time by the increased travel to the new Brewster aircraft plant at Street and Jacksonville roads, Johnsville.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

A shelter tent is a "pup" tent and our Army and Marine Corps uses thousands of them in field maneuvers, in training, on short marches and for over-night bivouacs. They are like an inverted V, simple and easy to set up and take down quickly.

They cost about $10 each and our army uses thousands of them. Buy War Bonds and Stamps from your bank, postoffice and in many retail stores to help pay for these necessary items for our fighting forces. Help your community reach its War Bond Quota by investing at least 10 percent of your income in War Bonds or Stamps every pay day.

Sad Cypress by AGATHA CHRISTIE

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

It went on and on—the damning story. How Nurse Hopkins had accompanied Mary to the lodge, the appearance of Elinor, her exclamation, the invitation to sandwiches, the plate being handed first to Mary. Elinor's suggestion that everything be washed up, and her further suggestion that Nurse Hopkins should come upstairs with her and assist in sorting out clothes. There were frequent interruptions and objections from Sir Edwin Bulmer.

Elinor thought: "Yes, it's all true—and she believes it. She's certain I did it. And every word she says is the truth—that's what's so horrible. It's all true."

Once more, as she looked across the court, she saw the face of Hercule Poirot regarding her thoughtfully—almost kindly. Seeing her with too much knowledge. . . .

The piece of cardboard with the scrap of label pasted on to it was handed to the witness. "Do you know what this is?" "It's a bit of a label."

"Can you tell the jury what label?" "Yes—it's a part of a label off a tube of hypodermic tablets. Morphine tablets half-grain—like the one I lost."

"You are sure of that?" "Of course I'm sure. It's off my tube."

The judge said: "Is there any special mark on it by which you can identify it as the label of the tube you lost?"

"No, my lord, but it must be the same."

"Actually, all you can say is that it is exactly similar?" "Well, yes, that's what I mean." The court adjourned.

It was another day. Sir Edwin Bulmer was on his feet cross-examining. He was not at all bland now. He said sharply: "This attaché case we've heard so much about. On June 28th it was left in the main hall of Hunterbury all night?"

Nurse Hopkins agreed: "Yes." "Rather a careless thing to do, wasn't it?"

Nurse Hopkins flushed. "Yes, I suppose it was."

"Are you in the habit of leaving dangerous drugs lying about where any one could get at them?" "No, of course not."

"Oh! You're not? But you did it on this occasion?" "Yes."

"And it's a fact, isn't it, that anybody in the house could have got at that morphia if they'd wanted to?" "I suppose so."

"No suppose about it. It is so, isn't it?" "Well—yes."

"It wasn't only Miss Carlisle who could have got at it? Any of the servants could. Or Dr. Lord. Or Mr. Roderick Welman. Or Nurse O'Brien. Or Mary Gerrard herself."

"No, she didn't." "She was often in your cottage, wasn't she?"

"Not very often." "I suggest to you that she was there very frequently, and that she, of all the people in the house, would be the most likely to guess that there was morphia in your case."

"I don't agree." "Sir Edwin paused a minute. 'You told Nurse O'Brien in the morning that the morphia was missing?'"

"Yes." "I put it to you that what you really said was: 'I have left the morphia at home. I shall have to go back for it.'"

"No, I didn't." "You didn't suggest that the morphia had been left on the mantelpiece in your cottage?"

"Well, when I couldn't find it I thought that must have been what had happened."

"In fact, you didn't really know what you'd done with it?" "Yes, I did. I put it in the case."

"Then why did you suggest on the morning of June 29th that you had left it at home?" "Because I thought I might have done it."

"I put it to you that you're a very careless woman."

"That's not true."

"You make rather inaccurate statements sometimes, don't you?" "No, I don't. I'm very careful what I say."

"Did you make a remark about a apricot from a rose tree on July 27th—the day of Mary Gerrard's death?" "I don't see what that's got to do with it!"

The judge said: "Is that relevant, Sir Edwin?" "Yes, my lord, it is an essential part of the defense, and I intend to call witnesses to prove that statement was a lie."

He resumed: "Do you still say you pricked your wrist on a rose tree on July 27th?" "Yes, I did."

Nurse Hopkins looked defiant. "When did you do that?" "Just before leaving the lodge and coming up to the house on the morning of July 27th."

Sir Edwin said skeptically: "And what rose tree was this?" "A climbing one just outside the lodge, with pink flowers."

"You're sure of that?" "I'm quite sure."

Sir Edwin paused and then asked: "You persist in saying the morphia was in the attaché case when you

Nuptials Interest Many

Two young women attended Miss Violet C. Burtonwood, of 641 Beaver street, on Saturday afternoon when at a ceremony in St. James' Episcopal Church at four o'clock she was wed to Mr. William Charles Johnston, 259 McKinley street.

The attendants were Mrs. Louis Townsend, Jr., Beaver street, a sister of the bride, who served as matron of honor; and Miss Alberta Larzelere, Bristol Township, bridesmaid. Mr. Johnston had as his groomsmen, his brother-in-law, Mr. William K. White, Jackson street; and the usher for the occasion was Mr. Louis Townsend, Jr.

The Rev. George E. Boswell performed the ceremony before a large company of relatives and friends of the contracting parties. White gladioli and palms decorated the edifice.

The bride made her way to the altar as a bridal march was played by Mrs. Minerva Epstein, organist. The vocalist for the occasion, Miss June McLaughlin, Beaver street, sang "At Dawning" and "Because."

A handsome princess style gown of white satin, worn by the bride, had vertical lace panels from the shoulders to the hem-line. The sleeves which puffed at the shoulders ended in points over her hands. The neck-line was sweetheart style, and the bodice was shirred. The gown had a short train. Her fingertip veil of Irish lace was attached to a tiara of seed pearls. She wore white calfskin sandals, and carried an arm bouquet of mixed white flowers. The bride also wore a pearl necklace and zircon earrings, gifts from the groom.

The matron of honor was attired in blue, and the bridesmaid in yellow. Their floor-length gowns being patterned alike of silk organdy and lace. The bodices were of lace, and lace inserts reached from the waists to the hem-lines. Sleeves were short and puffed. Mrs. Townsend had trim of a cluster of pink flowers at the neckline. She wore blue slippers, and a floral headdress and shoulder-length veil to match her gown. Miss Larzelere wore gold-toned slippers, and floral headdress and veil of yellow. Each carried an arm bouquet of flowers in pastel shades, the ribbons on the same matching the individual costumes. The attendants wore strands of beads and head bracelets matching their gowns, these being their gifts from the bride.

To his attendants, Mr. Johnston gave tie pins and clasps. At Bowen's Restaurant, following the ceremony, a dinner was served to members of the immediate families. Mr. Johnston and bride then left for a week's stay in Wildwood, N. J. Mrs. Johnston's travelling costume was a pink silk jersey dress, pink suede slippers, white pique hat and white accessories.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

Eternal God, we pray this day for our country, that it may be exalted in righteousness; for those who exercise authority, that they may be wise and just; for all our citizens, that they may be faithful in the performance of duty and obedient to the law of the land and the dictates of conscience; that our land may be a land of liberty, of true religion, of mutual service, acceptable to thee, O God, and honoured throughout the world. Through Jesus Christ our Lord Amen.

Her corsage was of white stephanotis.

The newlyweds will reside with the groom's mother, Mrs. Elsie Layng, at 259 McKinley street. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Burtonwood, Beaver street.

ASKS MOTHERS TO COOPERATE

Mothers or wives of men now in the armed forces of the United States and who formerly resided in Croydon, Bridgewater, Eddington, Cornwells Heights or Andalusia are asked to contact Mrs. Joseph W. ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

Number one in the expected parade of Hollywood features dealing with various aspects of the nation at war is "Powder Town." Victor McLaglen is its swashbuckling hero, and the film moved into the Grand Theatre yesterday.

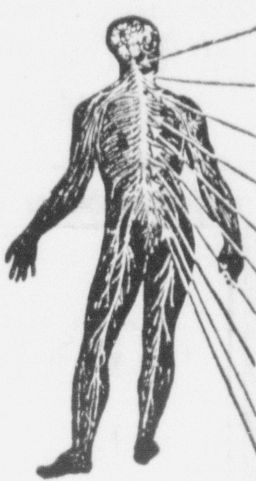

Here is an attraction that lives up to its advance notices, which proclaimed it to be a stirring melodrama presenting a behind-the-scenes view of our lusty Republic in the throes of girding for armed conflict.

RITZ THEATRE

There's a memorable experience in store for you at the Ritz Theatre, where Bette Davis is at her superb best in the starring role "In This Our Life."

The film is adapted from one of last season's leading best-sellers by Ellen Glasgow. The dramatic essence of the book is immeasurably heightened by the brilliant performances of Miss Davis, Olivia de Havilland, George Brent and Dennis Morgan.

VOLUME

We are not interested in having a great mass of money.

Not in volume, because it creates a temptation to invest the money carelessly.

We would much prefer to always be short of money to invest than to have thousands upon thousands on hand with no prospect of placing it.

There is a temptation to "take a flyer" on some doubtful properties in order to put the money out.

We have money to loan on safe risks.

We are sound, safe and prosperous and propose to do all possible to keep that way.
